2004 Annual Conference

West Yellowstone, MT
October 6–9

A Letter from the President of NAADAC

NAADAC President
Roger A. Curtiss, NCAC II

Dear Friend:

Attending NAADAC's Annual Conference is about networking, honoring achievement, understanding the latest research on the disease of addiction, improving prevention and treatment, and helping to shape the Association's exciting future. In short, it's about exploring new frontiers.

It's only fitting, then, NAADAC's Annual Conference, October 6-9, 2004, will be held in an area that symbolizes America's "Great Frontier": West Yellowstone, Montana.

I take special pride in this year's conference, because I call Montana home. I assure you that you will enjoy the very best of Western warmth and hospitality during your Montana stay.

Addiction professionals will find value in exhibits and sessions led by experts on workforce development, culture-specific care, research-to-service, co-occurring disorders, criminal justice, ending discrimination, and many other topics that enable addiction professionals to continue to provide high-quality and effective evidence-based care.

Of course, as with all NAADAC conferences, CEUs will be available.

Beyond the top-notch education, you can look forward to Western-themed entertainment and the bestowing of annual awards at the President's Dinner. What's more, I think you will find that the Yellowstone National Park area is an ideal place to seek peace, comraderie and renewal—important elements for finding balance and helping us excel in our often stressful profession.

As enticing as it all sounds, NAADAC understands that cost is an increasing concern in planning to attend a major national conference. That's why I'm pleased to announce that this year's hotel rate and members' tuition cost is less than half of what it was last year. Yet, you can still count on the same level of high quality programming for which NAADAC is internationally known.

I am proud that NAADAC is providing such a spectacular conference opportunity. As a participant, you will explore new frontiers within your profession, your country, and perhaps even yourself. Please join me and hundreds of other addiction professionals in West Yellowstone, Montana, October 6-9, 2004.

Sincerely,

Roger A. Curtiss, NCAC II
